

Study Shows Nontraditional Learners Play A Critical Role in the Economy

Last Updated Wednesday, 12 August 2009

The center for American Progress has published a study on working learners that shows how Beyond Talent's support for non-traditional graduates impacts communities!

"College graduates have had higher incomes than those with lower educational attainment. IN 2006, the average annual income for a bachelor's degree was $56,897; an associate degree averaged $39,846; and a high school degree, $30,027/"
